

Happy July, everyone. I enjoyed seeing a lot of you at ALA. Wasn't it an enormous conference this year? To me, it seemed bigger than usual. Or maybe I was fooled by the conference book that weighed in at almost five pounds. That's a lot of information! So now we're back at work, reenergized by the new ideas and inspirational programs we soaked up in New Orleans.

There are quite a few products this month, as well. The publishers normally slow down a bit in July and August, getting ready for the big fall releases. So this is a perfect time to look over the new July titles, and also visit www.crimsoninc.com and see if there are some late Spring/early Summer titles that you missed. Please let us know if you need some help with your collection development; we're always happy to tell you what your library colleagues are buying.

We're doing a lot of different types of processing on the gaming titles now: dummy cases, locking cases, inserts into the manufacturer-provided cases. Let us know if you need some suggestions on how to shelve and circulate your multimedia. We've seen it done a lot of ways, and we're sure to have some ideas that you can implement in your library.

Enjoy these summer days.
