

I have some exciting news that will perhaps be more exciting to some of you than others. For those who have bemoaned our website's awkward search function or slightly clunky layout, moan no more. We are undergoing a complete redesign of crimsoninc.com. The process keeps the stomach juices churning with my incessant worries about "what if." However, I am told that in a month or less, our online presence will be better than ever. Many of our libraries simply fax or email their orders and bypass dear old crimsoninc.com completely. But for the rest, the new design should feel fresh and much more user-friendly. What if? No, it will be terrific. (You won't see it until it is absolutely terrific. I promise.)

St. Patrick's Day is coming up, and I'm excited about the prospect of some corned beef and cabbage. I'm also excited about the new videogame titles coming out this month. I was happy to see plenty of E- and T-rated titles on the list.

If PLA is on your schedule, I hope you'll jot down booth 1459 because that's where we'll be setting up shop. Denver is a fantastic convention city, and I am looking forward to a few days of chatting with all of you.

Happy March!
