April 2020

HAPPY APRIL TO ALL OF YOU who are working in your pajamas. It seems like a year ago that we sent the March edition of Crimson Ink. Remember when we were going about our lives as usual until — wham! — schools closed and libraries closed and the world tilted on its axis and a virus spread across the land? Well, here we are. Healthy and grateful and, to be honest, a bit on edge.

Yes, we still have new titles coming into the warehouse and are shipping orders to folks who want them. The upside of being a small-sized operation is that we can have just one person in the warehouse while the rest of us work remotely. Items are wiped upon receipt and again before shipping. We are taking all precautions to keep you — and us — as safe as possible.

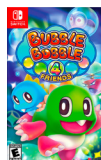

Luckily, both April and May are shaping up to be light months for new releases. It will be a breeze to catch up in June. Or July. Feel free to place orders for shipment at a later date.

With many libraries closing their fiscal year at the end of June, I suspect we will be doing more pro-forma invoices than ever before. If you would like to be billed for orders not yet shipped, please let me know and we'll make it happen in whatever way works best for your billing department. Maybe we will all be back to work by then. Maybe not. We will figure it out.

In other news, I arranged for an enormous dumpster to be dropped in my driveway. Spring cleaning has never been so ruthlessly undertaken at our house. My daughter, unhappily returned from college, eggs me on in this endeavor.

Yep, we are keeping busy. I hope you are, as well. Stay safe and healthy
